Memorandum

[Application(s) for preliminary injunction denied;
motion of defendant United States to dismiss granted.]

Decided: April 4, 2000

Rode & Qualey (Patrick D. Gill and Eleanore Kelly-Kobayashi)
for the plaintiff.

David W. Ogden, Acting Assistant Attorney General; Joseph I. Liebman, Attorney in Charge, International Trade Field Office, Commercial Litigation Branch, Civil Division, U.S. Department of Justice (James A. Curley); and Office of Assistant Chief Counsel, U.S. Customs Service (Jeffrey E. Reim), of counsel, for defendant United States.

Grunfeld, Desiderio, Lebowitz & Silverman LLP (Edward B. Ackerman, Laurence M. Friedman and Michael T. Cone) for defendant American Motorists Insurance Company.

Law Offices of Michael P. O'Connor (Michael P. O'Connor) for defendant C.A. Shea & Company.

AQUILINO, Judge: The plaintiff commenced this action with the simultaneous filing of a summons and complaint, plus an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction, averring, among other things, that the U.S. Customs Service had recently threatened to impose sanctions against plaintiff which would include, inter alia, the loss of immediate delivery privileges for all merchandise imported into the United States. Such action would have a detrimental impact on the company, one of the largest pharmaceutical manufacturers in the United States and the world. As is attested to in . . . the affidavit . . . attached to the Application for a Temporary Restraining Order and Order to Show Cause . . ., the imposition of sanctions is imminent.¹

Government counsel were afforded an immediate opportunity to dispel the actuality of such a threat. When they proved, at first blush, unable to do so, this court granted the requested temporary restraining order, which the government then formally moved to extend, pending presentation of all the facts and circumstances underlying this action and its resolution by the court.

I

At its commencement, the plaintiff purported to be in the middle of an "ongoing dispute" with Customs over the proof necessary to satisfy the Service that pharmaceuticals imported for clinical and laboratory testing under subheading 9813.00.30 of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule of the United States had been exported or destroyed so as to satisfy the conditions of the bond(s) posted in regard thereto.² The verified complaint posits administrative cases 1996-3801-02071401, 1997-3801-00350501, 1998-3801-20027401, 1998-3801-20028001, 1998-3801-20045401, 1998-3801-20078601, 1998-3801-20102601, 1998-3801-20146601, 1998-3901-20099101, 1998-3801-20254401, 1998-3801-20222901, 1998-3801-20289201, 1999-2304-20109801, 1999-4601-20208501, and 1999-3801-20235801 as involving claims for liquidated damages against the plaintiff.

At the hearing held in open court on plaintiff's application for a preliminary injunction, the government presented evidence as to each of the afore-numbered matters, essentially via Customs Service Fines, Penalties & Forfeitures officers ("FPFO") from the ports of Detroit, Michigan and Laredo, Texas. The former considers the cases bearing the eight-digit suffixes 00350501, 20099101, 20254401, 20289201 and 20208501 to be closed. See Declaration of Darrell E. Woodard, paras. 10, 34, 17, 19, 35. With regard to those matters partially numbered 20078601, 20102601, 20222901 and 20235801, it is reported that Customs had claimed liquidated damages in each, alleging a breach of a [Temporary Importation Bond or] TIB . . . due to Warner-Lambert's failure to 1) export or destroy the imported merchandise prior to expiration of the bond period, and/or 2) provide timely proof to Customs [in regard thereto³,] that the plaintiff importer has filed petitions for relief therein, and that the Service has yet to resolve any of them. See id., paras. 14, 15, 18, 20, 25. In matter 20146601, involving a claim for $4,080.00, a petition was filed, which led to reduction of that amount to $100, albeit as yet unpaid by the plaintiff and thereby deemed delinquent by Customs. See id., para. 16. Petitions were also filed in cases 02071401, 20027401, 20028001 and 20045401. Each was denied, and the Service takes the position that liquidated damages are due and owing.⁴

Finally, according to the Laredo FPFO, the bond period in matter 20109801 expired on January 19, 1999. Warner-Lambert and AMICO have submitted no documentation to Customs to cancel this bond nor . . . petitioned for relief. This claim is now considered delinquent.

Declaration of Charles E. Dickinson, para. 8. Nonetheless, this declarant further swears as follows:

10. The claim referenced in paragraph 8 above has not been referred to the Department of Justice for initiation of collection actions.

* * *

12. To date, importer sanction proceedings have not been initiated by Customs in connection with this de-

³ Declaration of Darrell E. Woodard, para. 21.

⁴ See id., para. 9 and U.S. Defendant's Exhibit B-2; para. 11 and U.S. Defendant's Exhibit C; para. 12 and U.S. Defendant's Exhibit D; para. 13 and U.S. Defendant's Exhibit E.

delinquent claim. In that regard, notification of proposed sanctions has not been issued to Warner-Lambert. In addition, importer sanctions will not be initiated in the future in connection with this claim.

13. As FPFO for the Port of Laredo, I have not initiated surety sanction procedures against AMICO in connection with the delinquent claim referenced in paragraph 8 above. Specifically, a "Preliminary Show Cause" notification has not been issued to AMICO in connection with this delinquent claim.

Id., paras. 10, 12, 13.

The Detroit FPFO makes similar representations with regard to the five numbered claims, supra, deemed now delinquent by him, e.g.:

To date, importer sanction proceedings have not been initiated by Customs in connection with these five claims. In that regard, notification of proposed sanctions . . . has not been issued to Warner-Lambert. In addition, importer sanctions will not be initiated in the future in connection with these five claims.

Declaration of Darrell E. Woodard, para. 30(f). As for the surety, he declares:

. . . I have not initiated [] surety sanction procedures against AMICO . . . in connection with the five delinquent claims referenced . . . above. Specifically, a "Preliminary Show Cause" notification . . . has not been issued to AMICO in connection with these five delinquent claims.⁵

⁵ Id., para. 33. Nevertheless, the plaintiff has brought to the court's attention that, just prior to this declaration and its submission at the hearing, a Customs Notice of Penalty or Liquidated Damages Incurred and Demand for Payment had indeed issued to AMICO on Form 5955A in the amount of $28,912.96 for case 1998-3801-20102601. On the other hand, letters from government counsel and Mr. Woodard dated March 3 and 6, 2000, respectively, advise that the aforesaid demand in the latter's name had been "sent in error" and thus been rescinded. Cf. Defendant AMICO's Answer and Counterclaim, para. 44 and Exhibit C.

Given these representations on the record, the court no longer can discern the kind of threat of immediate, irreparable injury necessary to grant or to sustain the extraordinary equitable relief that is a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction. And this and other courts have long held that failure to show such threat is ground itself to deny that relief, whatever an applicant's showing with regard to likelihood of success on the merits, the public interest, and the balance of harm among the parties⁶. See, e.g., American Steve-

⁶ The court notes in passing that defendant AMICO has interposed an answer to plaintiff's complaint alleging, among other things:

50. It is beyond dispute that Customs has demanded payment from AMICO on the bonds.

51. It is beyond dispute that Warner-Lambert executed [an] indemnification agreement whereby it promised to post collateral security upon proof of a demand by Customs.

52. Warner-Lambert's challenge to Customs' demand has no bearing on determining Warner-Lambert's obligation to place sufficient funds with AMICO, as it is irrelevant whether Warner-Lambert believes AMICO will ultimately be liable for the demands asserted by Customs. In fact, it is this very uncertainty which the collateral security clause is meant to address.

* * *

56. The language of the indemnity agreement is clear and unequivocal: Warner-Lambert is required to indemnify AMICO for "any and all liability, claim, demand, loss, damage, expense, cost and attorney's fees which it shall at any time incur by reason of its execution of any bond or its payment of or its liability to pay any claim . . ." (emphasis added).

Whereupon AMICO prays for entry of judgment in its favor, while at the same time joining in plaintiff's application for a pre-

II

In addition to opposing injunctive relief, the government has interposed a motion to dismiss the complaint on the grounds of lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, mootness, and failure to exhaust administrative remedies.

Of course, matters that are moot do not entail any live case or controversy within the meaning of Article III of the U.S. Constitution, leaving federal courts organized thereunder with no

liminary injunction against Customs -- drawn to protect its interests as surety. It states, in part, that this measure is warranted because it will relieve AMICO of the threat of irreparable economic harm if it is sanctioned, as well as the threat of a lengthy and costly administrative proceeding, the existence and outcome of which could be highly prejudicial to the company's business and reputation.

Defendant AMICO's Response to Plaintiff's Motion for a Preliminary Injunction, p. 4. But economic injury is not necessarily "irreparable". See, e.g., American Stevedoring, Inc. v. U.S. Customs Service, 18 CIT 331, 335, 852 F.Supp. 1067, 1071 (1994), citing Sampson v. Murray, 415 U.S. 61 (1974); Wisconsin Gas Co. v. Federal Energy Regulatory Comm'n, 758 F.2d 669 (D.C. Cir. 1985); Arbor Foods, Inc. v. United States, 8 CIT 355, 600 F.Supp. 217 (1984).

The answer filed on behalf of defendant C.A. Shea & Company avers that the plaintiff has failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted since the company is not a proper party to this action. That is, the company's executive vice-president attests that, contrary to plaintiff's pleadings, C.A. Shea is not an agent of AMICO and "does not sign, execute or bind and bond on behalf of any surety company." Affidavit of Lee V. Barther, paras. 3, 4. See Defendant AMICO's Response to Plaintiff's Motion for a Preliminary Injunction, p. 9 ("AMICO has no objection to C.A. Shea & Company being dismissed from the instant action").

authority to act in regard thereto. See generally Warth v. Seldin, 422 U.S. 490 (1975), and cases cited therein. According to the record now developed herein, the administrative cases numbered 1997-3801-00350501, 1998-3901-20099101, 1998-3801-20254401, 1998-3801-20289201, and 1999-4601-20208501 are apparently closed and thus moot.

On the other hand, the report of Customs at bar is that the matters numbered 1998-3801-20078601, 1998-3801-20102601, 1998-3801-20222901, and 1999-3801-20235801 involve petitions still under active agency consideration, which status implicates the constitutional doctrine of ripeness under Article III. That is, in general, only ripe matters should be heard and decided by federal courts.⁷ Indeed, Congress, in the exercise of its authority under that article, has provided in its Customs Courts Act of 1980 that, in an unspecified action like this, "the Court of International Trade shall, where appropriate, require the exhaustion of administrative remedies." 28 U.S.C. §2637(d). As has been pointed out, the purpose of this authority is to protect courts from premature involvement in administrative proceedings, and to protect agencies "from judicial interference until an administrative decision has been formalized and its effects felt in a concrete way by the challenging parties."

⁷ See, e.g., Cedars-Sinai Med. Ctr. v. Watkins, 11 F.3d 1573, 1580 (Fed.Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1235 (1994). Administrative case 1998-3801-20146601, mitigated to the as-yet-unpaid $100, implicates another well-established principle, namely, de minimis non curat lex. See, e.g., Wisconsin Dep't of Revenue v. Wm. Wrigley, Jr., Co., 505 U.S. 214, 231-32 (1992); United States v. Cavalier Shipping Co., 60 CCPA 152, C.A.D. 1103, 478 F.2d 1256 (1973).

Intercargo Ins. Co. v. United States, 19 CIT 1435, 1437, 912 F. Supp. 544, 546 (1995), aff'd, 129 F.3d 135 (Fed.Cir. 1997), quoting Abbott Laboratories v. Gardner, 387 U.S. 136, 148-49 (1967).

In light of the record now established, the court finds it appropriate that the plaintiff be required to exhaust fully its administrative remedies. The finding applies to all those aforementioned matters not administratively moot or judicially ripe, which leaves only cases numbered 1996-3801-02071401, 1998-3801-20027401, 1998-3801-20028001, 1998-3801-20045401, and 1999-2304-20109801 open for any further discussion, given the representations, supra, that Customs considers the claims therein due and owing. In fact, plaintiff's application for injunctive relief itself concedes that the claim made in . . . Case No. 1999-2304-20109801[] was properly made because the material was not exported or destroyed within the required time. The liquidated damages in the amount of $11,046.58 is [sic] being tendered to Customs.

Affidavit of Thomas Czubak, para. 13. See Plaintiff's Complaint, para. 15. With regard to the other four matters, the primary concern, as sworn to by the plaintiff in its complaint, is stated to be as follows:

30. The imposition of sanctions on plaintiff while the challenge to the liquidated damages assessments are [sic] pending in the Court of International Trade would have a severe disruptive effect on plaintiff's importing operations and testing facilities.

31. Plaintiff is one of the largest pharmaceutical manufacturers in the United States, and the world, and must be able to promptly and efficiently test experimental drugs on a continuing basis; the imposition of sanctions would have a detrimental impact on all of plaintiff's entries, which number in the thousands annually.

32. The imposition of sanctions against plaintiff would interrupt the continuing manufacturing and supply of its pharmaceutical and non-prescription drug products and potentially limit or prevent their availability to patients and consumers who use them.

See Affidavit of Thomas Czubak, paras. 26-28. See also id., paras. 5, 16; Plaintiff's Complaint, paras. 5, 6. But Customs now denies any intent to seek sanctions⁸ as to the claims deemed delinquent. See Declaration of Darrell E. Woodard, para. 30(f), supra.

This disclaimer thus raises the necessary question as to what, if any, actionable injury is being suffered by the plaintiff, which like any other federal complainant, must allege "personal injury fairly traceable to the defendant's allegedly unlawful conduct and likely to be redressed by the requested relief." Allen v. Wright, 468 U.S. 737, 751 (1984), citing Valley Forge Christian College v. Americans United for Separation of Church and State, Inc., 454 U.S. 464, 472 (1982). See Friends of the Earth, Inc. v. Laidlaw Environmental Servs. (TOC), Inc., 120 S.Ct. 693, 704 (2000):

⁸ The court notes in passing that one of plaintiff's ethical pharmaceutical products singled out in its motion papers as possibly threatened by the government, namely, Rezulin® (troglitazone), is now being removed from the market, albeit on grounds not related hereto. See F.D.A. Withdraws Drug for Diabetics, Citing Health Risks, N.Y. Times, March 22, 2000, at A1, col. 1.

In Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 560-561 . . . (1992), we held that, to satisfy Article III's standing requirements, a plaintiff must show (1) it has suffered an "injury in fact" that is (a) concrete and particularized and (b) actual or imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical; (2) the injury is fairly traceable to the challenged action of the defendant; and (3) it is likely, as opposed to merely speculative, that the injury will be redressed by a favorable decision.

Here, this court cannot, and therefore does not, conclude that the plaintiff now satisfies these requirements for proceeding with this action. Cf. Intercargo Ins. Co. v. United States, 19 CIT 1435, 912 F.Supp. 544 (1995), aff'd, 129 F.3d 135 (Fed.Cir. 1997).

Of course, this conclusion does not leave Warner-Lambert without any judicial remedy. Indeed, as the plaintiff itself points out, in United States v. Utex Int'l Inc., 857 F.2d 1408, 1414 (Fed.Cir. 1988), the court held that it was unnecessary for a surety to pay liquidated damages and then file a protest thereof under 19 U.S.C. §1514 before defending itself in a collection action brought against it by Customs pursuant to 28 U.S.C. §1582. That is, as subsequently explained in United States v. Toshoku America, Inc., 879 F.2d 815, 818 (Fed.Cir. 1989), proof that an importer has complied with the terms and conditions of its bond "has traditionally been and still remains a complete defense to a collection suit brought on the bond", with the court of appeals professing to have held in Utex that "an assessment of liquidated damages is not a 'charge or exaction' that must be challenged by protest under 19 U.S.C. § 1514".

III

Whether or not the grant of temporary equitable relief to date has aided in sorting out the parties' differences, or allayed genuine concerns the plaintiff may have had with regard to its enumerated experimental cases and its worldwide business, the court in the light of the foregoing facts and circumstances is required now to deny the application(s) for a preliminary injunction and to grant the U.S. defendant's motion to dismiss plaintiff's complaint. Judgment will enter, dismissing this action in its entirety.⁹

⁹ The court notes in passing that, while this dismissal is not based upon lack of subject-matter jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. §1581(i), which issue the court has not found necessary to reach herein, when a main action is dismissed, ancillary claims without an independent basis of jurisdiction, which is the case here, also fail. See, e.g., Old Republic Ins. Co. v. United States, 14 CIT 377, 741 F.Supp. 1570 (1990). Cf. 6 Wright & Miller, Federal Practice §1433 (1990).
